This is not an exhaustive list of all the possible training resources an individual or group might access to further their expertise within the field of Tactical Medicine (TM). If you know of any courses offered on a regular basis by an Organization, Association, Society, Academy, Institution or School which you think others might benefit from. Please send your recommendations to our ACEP Section Staff Liaison (dfechner@acep.org). The Newsletter Editor will evaluate your suggestion and decide whether to post the contact information in a future Newsletter.

Now the disclaimer: This list has not been “approved” by either the Tactical Emergency Medicine (TEM) Section or by the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP). It is compiled solely for educational purposes. Only two criteria are used to decide whether something should be placed on the list. The entity must offer a dedicated TM course or training module and it must be offered at minimum on an annual basis. Teaching TM as a subsection of a larger course is not sufficient. No effort has been made to evaluate the quality of these programs with respect to the content of their courses, or the manner in which they are taught. It is the sole responsibility of each person who pursues TM related training to decide which educational resources might be the most appropriate given their present level of skill and circumstances.

The author has no financial conflict of interest to declare between himself and any of the training resources listed above.
